Pathways Guide

When selecting a VCE program, students should consider their pathways beyond school, to ensure the subjects they have selected address prerequisites for University or TAFE courses; and are appropriately suited to their interests and abilities.

A 'pathway' is not a pre-set combination of units that you have to choose, but a suggested package of subjects for students to consider when selecting a VCE program. Students should use the following section as a guide to construct their VCE or VET program, in discussion with parents, teachers, Careers Advisors and other knowledgeable sources.

NOTE:

- Students are free to choose any combination of units for the VCE, so long as the compulsory English requirement has been satisfied.
- The suggested pathways are examples only. Students do not have to choose one of the pathways in this section.
- When deciding on the best combination of units, students should visit the VTAC website (<http://www.vtac.edu.au>) and consider all prerequisites for any University or TAFE course of interest.
- For English as an Additional Language students in Year 11, it is compulsory to select 'English as an Additional Language' (EAL) in addition to the compulsory English requirement of 'Bridging EAL'.

Why Suggested Pathways?

- To help students and parents see connections between VCE/VET and TAFE, University and employment.
- To provide purpose and coherence to the student's VCE program.
- To guide students who have a clear pathway beyond school, but are unsure of the most appropriate combination of subjects.

How to Use the Pathways Guide

Students who have a clear pathway beyond school in mind should use this section. Not all students will have a clear pathway in mind at this stage, and should use this section to identify any potential areas of interest, in conjunction with subject descriptors in this handbook, when deciding on a program.

For students considering Higher Education (University, etc.), it is important to remember that prerequisites for courses and careers can change from year to year. It is vital that students seek out the most recent information from VTAC's website (VICTERs), and/or Careers Teachers. Prerequisite subjects for courses are not negotiable and must be met to gain entry to that specific course. Subjects listed in the "Additional Considerations - Subject Bonus" section of VTAC course search will often give direction to desirable units of study students should consider.

Once a career direction has been decided, students should 'backwards plan' to decide which program and combination of units will lead to their chosen career pathway. At this stage students should ask:

- Do I have some ability in/am I good at the subjects I wish to pursue?
- Do I enjoy the subjects and the field of work to which they lead?
- How do these subjects relate to my career intention?
